Excerpt from Our Country Versus Party Spirit: Being a Rejoinder to the Reply of Prof. Morse It is a familiar fact, if several persons combine to shout very earnestly that a dog is mad, his life would be as liopeless as if he had communicated hydrophobia to a Whole neighbor hood. This has been With party leaders considered their shrewdest and most successful method for traducing the prin ciples and party now in power. I did sincerely hope to find you less closely affiliated With such. Without taking the space to repeat and answer them separately, to each question you ask under this head, commencing with, Did not the Republican party, c. I return arespeotful but emphatic. NO I Did space allow, I would substantiate that negative in each instance. As the best generalreply to your unwarranted confusion of thewhole Republican party with the extremest radicals that may mix among them, I quote your own languaoe further enz Every one of any experiance in political movements is aware that 011 both sides, in party excitements, there is every possible variety of character associated together. It is not safe, therefore, to characterize a cause by the character of some few who may be loud and forward in advocating it. Bad men may promote agood cause for bad ends. As confirmatory of your general Views you ask me to look at the state of the country. I do look at it most intently, as I have for years past, and I will tell you what I have seen: I have seen in the slave-holding states a race of men whom I recognize many excellent, intelligent, conscientious men - the exeptions) - who live chie?y in...
