PSYCHOLOGY (CLASSIC REPRINT)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Psychology Modern psychology is the gradually evolved product of the researches and hypotheses of several generations of scientists. Introducing a beginning student to this broad field is a serious task, the aims and means of which should be scrutinized carefully. Three principal objectives of the introductory course in psychology may be suggested. First, the student must be imbued with the experimental and critical spirit of psychology. He must become convinced that human problems can be regarded dispassionately and investigated objectively, so that the conclusions obtained transcend those of controversy and opinion. The student may forget many of the details of psychology, and undoubtedly will; but if he has caught the experimental attitude of the science, he will have formed a significant link in his liberal education. A second objective of an introductory course in psychology is to acquaint the student with representative samples of the results of psychological research, and with the most acceptable interpretations of these findings. Almost all unprejudiced thinkers agree that psychology has a large body of subject matter of an uncontroversial nature that is of value for its own sake. This experimental content should be presented clearly, fairly, and interestingly to the beginner, and without factional bias. In the introductory course all hobbies should be stabled and all hatchets buried. As a third aim, it is proper that the introductory course should describe some applications of psychology to the present needs of students, and to the problems that they may face in the future.
